 Let's make the /a/ sound! Let's listen our mouths to make the /a/ sound.	 Stretch the word. Say each sound as we move left to right. /a/. /a/. /a/.
 Say it. Tap it. Map it. Graph it. Write it. Say, tap, map, graph, and write the word ship.	I I can I can bake I can bake a I can bake a cake. Read each line. Add a word each time. Build the sentence. Repeat.

A Note About The VC Blending Drills

You might notice that some of the letter combinations in the VC blending drills resemble open syllables. However, these pages are not intended to teach syllable types or introduce words. They are designed specifically for beginning blending practice!

Before students can successfully blend three or more sounds to read CVC words, they need opportunities to practice connecting just two sounds.

These drills intentionally pair a consonant with a vowel to help students practice:

- Identifying individual letter-sound correspondences
- Connecting two sounds through successive blending
- Moving smoothly from one sound to the next without adding pauses or extra sounds
- Building the foundational blending skills needed for CVC word reading

Students should produce the sounds represented by the letters and blend them together smoothly. They are not being asked to identify these combinations as words, apply open-syllable rules, or memorize them.

The goal is blending sounds, not reading syllables. These drills are a temporary instructional scaffold that helps students develop the blending skills needed for successful word reading. Once students have mastered the VC blending drills, they can progress to the included CVC blending drills to practice connecting three sounds.
